Introduction

The Bunkyo University Foundation is an academic group with five campuses. The Headquarters is located at the Hatanodai campus in Tokyo's Shinagawa Ward. There are also three schools attached to the University - a kindergarten, a junior high school and a senior high school. Including the student enrollment in the kindergarten, there are 1,496 students attending these schools.

The Koshigaya campus, located in Koshigaya City, Saitama Prefecture, consists of the Faculty of Education, the Faculty of Human Sciences, the Faculty of Language and Literature, the Graduate School of Human Sciences (Master's & Doctoral program), the Graduate School of Language and Culture (Master's & Doctoral program), the Graduate School of Education (Master's program), the Special Postgraduate Course and the Foreign Student Department. 4,710 students are enrolled in the Koshigaya campus.

In the Shonan campus in Chigasaki City, Kanagawa Prefecture, 1,657 students are enrolled. The campus comprises the Faculty of Information and Communications, the Faculty of Health and Nutrition, the Graduate School of Information and Communications (Master's program).

There are currently 1,843 students enrolled and studying at our Tokyo Adachi campus in Tokyo's Adachi Ward. The campus is home to the Faculty of International Studies, the Faculty of Business Administration, and the Graduate School of International Studies (Master's program), as well as the Secretarial Department of the University.

In the Ishikawadai campus in Tokyo's Ota Ward, an elementary school where 329 students are enrolled is also attached to the Bunkyo University.

The teaching staff of the Bunkyo University Foundation have devoted themselves to providing personalized education, thus the teachers understand the needs of each and every student at the kindergarten, the elementary school, the junior high school, the senior high school, the university and the graduate schools. In light of the rapid speed of internationalization of Japanese society, the junior high school, the senior high school and the University have academic affiliation agreements with educational institutions in countries such as Ireland, Germany, Malta, Canada, the United States, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Indonesia, South Korea, Mongolia, Vietnam, China, Taiwan, Malaysia, and the Philippines. Under these agreements, most of our partner schools and international institutions have promoted student intercultural exchanges, including exchange programs in which students from Bunkyo and foreign universities study at each other's universities.

The Bunkyo University Foundation has stepped up its efforts to deepen the relationship between its schools and has striven to offer education in a manner that would increase the satisfaction of all students. Graduates of the Bunkyo University Foundation have been playing major roles in various communities and have received high acclaim for their contributions and achievements in society.

The Bunkyo University Foundation is resolved to serve the interest of society by providing education aimed at promoting the foundation for the global age, which is "Empathy for All Humanity".

人間愛

にんげんあい

"Education through Ningen Ai (Empathy for All Humanity)"

Bunkyo University is guided by the spirit of "Education through Ningen Ai (Empathy for All Humanity)," which implies encouraging love for others and thus leads to enthusiasm for learning. Under this watchword, Bunkyo University is currently engaged in a complete evaluation of its programs. The reason for this basic reassessment is the rapidly changing role of Japan in the world, and a belief that higher education should take leadership in preparing youth for the opportunities presented in this age of information technology and global exchange. At this early stage in the process of evaluation, internationalization has already begun.

Faculties

Koshigaya Campus

Faculty of Education

教育学部

Cultivating the hearts of future educators and their teaching techniques

The Faculty of Education was established in 1969 to help students aiming to work in teaching fields, making Bunkyo University the first private university in Japan to offer specialized courses for teacher training. Over 50 years since its establishment, the Faculty has produced more than 11,000 professionals teaching in elementary schools, junior high schools, senior high schools and special education schools across Japan. With the excellent achievements shown by its graduates in educational institutions across the nation, the Faculty of Education has won high acclaim from various communities as a distinguished training institution for teachers. In the 2020 academic year, the faculty opened a course, "Human Development and Education Course" to help students to become teachers specializing in child psychology ranging from infants to youth. We provide students with an educational environment in which their hearts as educators are cultivated, their teaching techniques sharpened, and dreams of becoming teachers for kindergartens, nursery schools, elementary schools, junior high schools, senior high schools and special education schools are realized.

Faculty of Human Sciences

人間科学部

Exploring and Scientific of humans

The modern world is in the midst of complicated family relations. Neighbors are less reliable and harmonious human relations are less sustainable than in the past. Many people feel it bothersome to build viable relationships with others. In order to tackle these problems, contemporary society needs to develop human resources who can research and comprehend humanity synthetically and profoundly. The Faculty of Human Sciences aims towards a general understanding of humans, focusing on psychology, sociology and lifelong learning with options such as cultural anthropology and social welfare. We established the Department of Psychology in the spring of 2008, accompanying the existing Department of Human Sciences and Clinical Psychology, as a result of our re-evaluation on how our learning and understanding of Human Sciences can contribute to resolve those problems the people of today are facing. Our three majors under Human Sciences are like "siblings" regarding their history. These relationships enables students to transcend academic barriers and to learn aspects from other fields that ultimately lead to an understanding of adjacent and supplemental academic domains.

Faculty of Language and Literature

文学部

Aiming to foster a rich humanity through languages

No advancement in communications technology will change the way humans interact with each other through languages. Speaking, listening, reading and writing will remain important. Believing in the potential of languages during this ever-changing era and exploring issues related to languages will become the first step for people to achieve understanding about themselves, different cultures and different societies. The Faculty of Language and Literature has established four departments to help students acquire foreign language skills and deepen their knowledge and understanding of language-related culture in the East and West while reflecting the reality of the rapidly internationalizing community. The Department of Japanese Language and Literature is designed to teach the Japanese language and literature from a global point of view. The Department of English Language and Literature is intended to help students learn about the livelihoods, philosophies and cultures of English-speaking people through the study of their language and literature. The Department of Chinese Language and Literature is aimed toward deepening students' understanding of China through studying its society, art, culture, history and people, as well as its language, literature and philosophy. The Department of Foreign Languages concentrates on preparing students for careers and future opportunities to use English and at least one other foreign language. This faculty's aim is to foster education for leading roles in the global community by sticking to language, which is the starting point of knowledge.

教育専攻科

Special Postgraduate Course

Advanced Education Specialist Program

The special postgraduate course is a one-year program for college graduates based on the School Education Law. We have a limited enrollment number of 15 students and a minimum requirement of obtaining 30 credits while in this course. We focus on three kinds of abilities in order to acquire advanced and practical leadership: the ability of instructional design, the ability of classroom management, and the ability of problem-solving in an educational business field. Upon completion of this course, students acquire teaching credentials for elementary school equal to a Master's degree. For students who graduated from a four-year university with Secondary School Teaching Credentials for elementary school, they can audit classes in the undergraduate program for education majors to obtain Elementary School Teaching Credentials. The expert staff in elementary school education will assist students in honing their teaching ability, provide counseling on teaching practice throughout the program and after program completion. Many of our staff possess valuable experiences as elementary school educators, as principals or supervisors of school boards.

外国人留学生別科

Foreign Student Department

The Foreign Student Department was established in April 1993 as a division of a Japanese language course from the Institute of Language and Culture. This department is designed to educate and train foreign students, mainly from Asian countries, for either one full year or one and a half years by offering Japanese language courses and helping them acquire basic knowledge about Japan. The purpose of training these students is to help them advance to higher educational institutions in Japan in the future, such as various faculties and graduate schools at Bunkyo University and other Japanese universities. Every year, some exchange students from New Zealand, Germany, China and South Korea take classes in the Foreign Student Department to acquire necessary skills as well. In addition, Japanese undergraduate students who want to teach Japanese language in the future learn knowledge and skills in this department. This course thus provides Japanese language and related curricula for foreign students for one year or one and a half years.

Faculty of Information and Communications

情報学部

Toward becoming an "information" specialist

Bunkyo University's Faculty of Information and Communications created the field of comprehensive informatics in Japan when it was established in 1980 as the country's first faculty of informatics. Students study information and communication technologies (ICT) - and related information in a multifaceted, comprehensive, and practical educational environment. They can also systematically master theories and techniques of information through the practical usage. This Faculty consists of the three departments - Department of Information Systems, Department of Information Society, and Department of Media and Communications. In the Department of Information Systems, students learn about information system and digital content creation.

In the Department of Information Society, students learn methods for creating businesses and utilizing ICT to resolve challenges in today's information society.

In the Department of Media and Communications, students learn theories about communication and media studies that include multimedia presentation techniques. The Faculty of Information and Communications offers conscientious education with small class sizes, via support from faculty staff, spanning from fundamental learning in the first year to graduation research in the fourth. It also features a cutting-edge information environment that is conducive to learning.

Faculty of Health and Nutrition

健康栄養学部

Toward nurturing body and spirit through nutrition

Degenerative chronic disease such as diabetes and dyslipidemia are increasing in Japan today. Therefore, the expertise of the dietitian is highly awaited. In response to such an expectation and need, the Department of licensed Dietitians in the Faculty of Health and Nutrition is focused on cultivating expert dietitians. In the years ahead, the main focus will be placed on prevention. Up until recently most registered dietitians have placed an emphasis on treating those who are already suffering, such as diabetics. The job of the dietitian, whether registered or otherwise, is dealing with people up front. They strive to understand the psychology of the prospective patients in order to appropriately carry out their professional goals. "Taking care of physical and mental health" is what our faculty's teaching philosophy is all about. We also collaborate with those disciplines with which we have interests in common.

Tokyo Adachi Campus

Faculty of International Studies

国際学部

Entrance to an international society

Planet Earth is like a global village where more than 7 billion people live. In the village, some of them are continuously glutting themselves with food, but others are struggling due to hunger and poverty. There are people who do not care about wasting energy, while some people are helping the cause not to spread environmental pollution. The Faculty of International Studies is designed to educate and train students' abilities to act from a global perspective - taking action while thinking of ways to interact with a variety of people in the world. This faculty consists of two departments: the Department of International Understanding and the Department of International Tourism and Hospitality Management. The Department of International Understanding helps raise students' intercultural awareness and improve their communication ability. It also addresses international cooperation dealing with a variety of global issues. Social science is another area in this department. Areas of study in the Department of International Tourism and Hospitality Management include tourism, leisure, food industry, art and culture. Tourism and hospitality are powerful measures for promoting intercultural exchange and understanding diverse values of the world. This department aims at equipping students with the ability to lead tourism and hospitality industries and cultural facilities from the viewpoint of citizens of a global community.

Faculty of Business Administration

経営学部

Build an ability to accommodate the real world

These days it is widely recognized that humans are not just a labor force but a source of creativity. Since humans are resources who grow companies and nations, we have been focusing on human resource development. Ordinary businesses in the world have been competing through cutting costs since the Industrial Revolution. However, cost efficient management faces its limit because of diminishing marginal productivity. We aim to foster students with a talent for humanity to break through the current stagnating to the situation. We also believe humanity will be required in every single business scene. Our Faculty of Business Administration aims to encourage our students to build their knowledge of Economics, Accounting and Management with humanity. Students will have face to face contact in small-sized lecture classes. We aim for a completely different mass production education system that will be effective in making good relationships between faculty members and students. We believe "a good relation" will lead to "a good result." We provide the three courses of Business Administration, Public Service and Accounting, which students can adapt to their own goals. Furthermore, our program will enhance opportunities for our students to study and another world through our study abroad programs in Asia, the United States and Europe. We are now planning to carry out intensive trial classes for Economics, Finance, Accounting and Presentation development through an English-medium.

Graduate Schools

Koshigaya Campus

Graduate School of Education

教育学研究科

This graduate school was established in April 2007. The main purpose is to improve professional teaching skills in curriculum guidance and problem-solving skills generally and practically through a dialogue education being conducted intensively in small groups. Our utmost concern is how to deal with various problems in school education and to conduct a wide variety of research on individuals, society at large and materials involved in the educational field. Specifically, theoretical and practical research in school education is essential in closely cooperating with the local community on the basis of traditional psychology and pedagogy. The highest ranked qualification of an advanced teaching credential, followed by first and second teaching credential can be earned after completion of the course. In addition, students are qualified to be school psychotherapists based on field work.

Graduate School of Human Sciences

人間科学研究科

The Graduate School of Human Sciences has Master's program and Ph. D. program for Clinical Psychology and Master's program for Human Sciences. Students at this graduate school include those who have graduated from other universities, with academic emphasis placed on psychology, and those who have work experience at companies and other places in related fields.

This graduate school provides students with the opportunity to study specialized academic fields broadly. Upon program completion, students will find jobs in various field such as schools and hospitals. They will also enter the industrial community, with some of them becoming counselors and others clinical psychotherapists.

Graduate School of Language and Culture

言語文化研究科

The Graduate School of Language and Culture's Master's and Ph. D. programs were established in response to requests from students who say they want to study more about languages and culture, which are the creative behaviors of humans, and also from students who want to acquire more language skills as a way to become language teachers in the future. The Language and Culture major is the only major with two specialties placed under it: second language and regional language. Students at this graduate school study not only specialized subjects belonging to their own courses, but also part of specialized subjects belonging to the other courses. This system is designed to enable students to broaden their educational and cultural levels and deepen their specialized knowledge.

Shonan Campus

Graduate School of Information and Communications

情報学研究科

The Graduate School of Information and Communications was established at the Bunkyo University Shonan campus in April, 2005, along with the Graduate School of International Studies. These are the first two graduate schools at the Shonan Campus. The Graduate School of Information and Communications is aimed toward fostering human resources with professional expertise who have 1) knowledge about information systems, 2) the ability to use such knowledge in practical areas and 3) the ability to build an information system for customer's needs.

Tokyo Adachi Campus

Graduate School of International Studies

国際学研究科

The Graduate School of International Studies has three courses: Development Studies, Studies for Civil Society & Regional Design, and Tourism Studies. It provides students with both specialized and general education so as to help them become professionals with advanced knowledge in the modern global society. After choosing their course, students are required to complete not only course-oriented specialized subjects, but also the core and related subjects which are indispensable for their professional fields. Each class is being instructed in small groups, thus, students learn and expand their research under close supervision from our faculty.

All classes are basically conducted in Japanese. Refer to the e-mail addresses shown below for further information concerning admission.

Inbound Programs

Exchange Students (Inbound)

Bunkyo University welcomes exchange students from our partner institutions.

Japanese Training Program for Far East University Students

Bunkyo University accepts students from the Far East University for two weeks in July every year. In addition to Japanese language lessons, the program provides students with opportunities for interactions with Japanese students at Bunkyo University through extra-curricular activities such as club activities.

Visit by Vietnamese and Mongolian University Students

Since 2010, Bunkyo University accepts students from the FPT University and the Mongolian University of Science and Technology for around two weeks in October every year. In addition to attending classes from the Department of Information and Communications, they participate in the Sho-To-Sai, which is the campus festival of Shonan Campus to learn Japanese culture and to strengthen their friendship with Bunkyo students.

EVENTS ON CAMPUS

International Week

Bunkyo University holds an event, International Week, annually for students to learn about our international exchange programs. During this event, reports of each overseas program, application requirements and some references for studying abroad are exhibited and a consulting corner is available. Also, students who have participated in these programs give presentations of their experiences and exchange students from our partner universities introduce their home universities.

● School Symbol

The Bunkyo University symbol has been given a motif of the “文” kanji (the first kanji in the name of our university) in cursive and the first letter in the Greek alphabet “alpha” (representing a certain unknown value), and has been formed in combination with a “circle” which means global peace and humanity.

Bunkyo University BUNKO

In Japanese,
“hanbunko” means to share
one another’s joys and sorrows.
“I’m BUNKO,
and I share my heart with you.”

I’m happy to meet you.
My name is BUNKO.
Half of my heart is yours.

- *Hanbunko also combines Bunkyo University’s “Bun” with love for people. Hanbunko expresses our sharing of everything with one another, our ups and downs, and our joys and sorrows.
- ⇒BUNKO holds half a heart to its chest. The name BUNKO comes from the Japanese word that means sharing in equal measure.
- *The seven colors of BUNKO’s heart represent the seven faculties of Bunkyo University.
- *BUNKO’s brown ear and tail represent the university’s logo.
- *BUNKO is soft and gentle, with a friendly personality.
- *BUNKO is wearing a pochette (What’s inside is a secret).
- *BUNKO looks a little like a bear, but no one is really sure.
